Driving Forces on the Future of Jobs for Brunei Darussalam

By Dr Diana Cheong, CSPS Chief Researcher

Our future landscape is not static and will definitely change, particularly with the impact of automation, IOT and the 4th Industrial Revolution (4IR). Therefore, a more futures-oriented approach to manpower planning involving strategic foresight is needed to ensure a sustainable job future. This presentation is part of a 2-year research project that CSPS has been conducting in this area. Using strategic foresight tools and consultations with over 100 stakeholders, a number of identified driving forces likely to impact the future of jobs are presented for the audience to discuss and prioritize.

9.45 am | Presentation 2

Global Trends and the Futures of Jobs

By Professor Sohail Inayatullah, UNESCO Chair in Futures Studies

In this presentation, Inayatullah will explore trends and disruptions as they relate to the futures of jobs. Four scenarios will be presented: no change - teaching and training for yesterday's jobs, marginal change - catching up and closing the gap between skills and jobs, adaptive change - teaching and training for the portfolio career and emerging jobs, radical change - the world after jobs. The presentation will be interactive inviting participants to create a new narrative around work and education. Inayatullah has worked recently with the governments of PRC, Cambodia, Philippines, Kazakhstan, Norway, Sri Lanka on education and work futures.
